PREFACE.

SINCE the Introduction is to come when the whole volume is complete, here is place only for thanks. The Coventry Corporation by their readiness in lending the MS. for transcription, and the Chairman and Committee of the Leamington Free Library for housing the same so safely, and its transcriber so airily, sunnily and cheerfully, have great claims on my gratitude. I would crave the continuance of their forbearance if I seem long about my task. It is a heavy one, and the nature of the work necessitates such care that hurry could only spell disaster.

But it is the readers of the Leet Book, as well as myself, who should tender their acknowledgments to Mr. W. H. Stevenson and Mr. R. E. G. Kirk, who at Dr. Furnivall's request undertook to revise the proofs of an entire stranger. To all that the book has thereby gained in exactitude, in the elucidation of many a bewildering crux, and in occasional annotation, the transcriber can bear most grateful testimony. Their labours have not been light; the value of them has been inestimable. Miss Brocas Harris has been as unflinching in kindness in the revision of proofs as she has been quick-sighted in the detection of casual errors. And Dr. Furnivall has throughout lent me the aid of his kind help and encouragement.

A NOTE ON COURTS LEET AND THE LEET BOOK.

A LEET is a court held by a lord of the manor or other liberty—or the lord's grantee—for the trial of petty offences. Concerning the meaning and derivation of the word itself scholars are divided, and where Professor Skeat and the late Professor Maitland only offer conjecture, it were best to suspend judgment. The derivation of the alternative to Court Leet, a word often occurring in these pages, view of frankpledge, is fairly assured; it is the Latinized—and mistaken—form of O.E. frithborh = peace-pledge, i. e. a tithing, or body of (normally) ten mutual sureties. The institution of the tithing tended to make every one his neighbour's policeman, and at a "view of frankpledge" every one amenable to the court's jurisdiction had to show himself properly included in an association of the kind.

With all this, however, we have here small concern. Justices-in-eyre and Justices of the Peace tended in time to diminish the importance of manorial jurisdiction, and the Leet Book reveals the court of fifteenth century Coventry less as a judicial than as a legislative body. It is the town parliament rather than the town tribunal of justice. The records show a series of ordinances or by-laws grounded on the petitions of aggrieved parties presented to the Leet, arranged year by year with fair regularity from 1420 to 1555. These touch mediæval urban life on every side, and are interwoven with a chronicle of the various happenings within the city. Of such is composed the great bulk of the matter of the Leet Book. A few leaves at the beginning and end of the volume, that would otherwise have been blank, were filled by Elizabethan and Stuart scribes with a miscellany that defies classification.

The value of the Leet Book from the social historian's point of view will be treated of in the Introduction in a subsequent part. Members of the E. E. T. S. may feel equally interested in the volume from the philological standpoint, as illustrating the Warwickshire dialect in the century before Shakespeare's birth.

One example of this, and I have done. In Coriolanus, II. i. 226, occurs the line, "Stalls, bulks and windows are smothered up." Dr. Murray gives no earlier example of the word bulk than the close of the 16th century, and Professor Skeat suggests as a derivation the O.N. bálk-r = beam, which should give M.E. bolc, hitherto not found. But in John Leeder's proclamation of 1421, p. 27, townspeople are enjoined to keep "no swyne in hur bolcys." Here is without doubt the connecting link between the Old Norse and the Shakespearian form.

[Note on the word Leet kindly communicated by Dr. Henry Bradley.] The difficult word Leet certainly represents 13th century Anglo-French lete. I think it possible that this may be adopted from O.E. læp, which we have in the "lathes" of Kent (for a suggestion to account for the phonological anomaly see N. E. D., article Lathe sb.¹). Læp seems to mean "landed property," and perhaps it may not be altogether too wild to suppose that it may have been used as a native synonym of "manor," and that either the simple word or some compound may have been employed to denote the meeting of the tenants of the manor, the manorial court. If such a use existed it would be natural that the Normans should adopt the term, pronouncing it as nearly as French phonetics would allow.

[Because disputes had taken place between Sir Gerard of Alspath and all the freemen of Old Fillongley, about these men's liberties, before the Judges at Warwick in the 36th year of King Henry, King John's son, (Oct. 28, 1251—Oct. 27, 1252), they finally came to an accord thus :

[Let present and to come know that I, Gerard of Alspath, have granted and quit-claimed, and by this present charter confirmed to all men of Old Fillungley and their heirs forever from me and my heirs all outside service, relief, ward and suit of court in free socage, freely and quietly without challenge, vexation or hindrance. Moreover I, Gerard, and my heirs, will warrant all liberties aforesaid to the men aforesaid of Old Fillungley and their heirs for ever. For this concession and quitclaim, warranty and recognition, the men aforesaid gave me for good of peace five marks and a half of silver. And that this my concession, [Mem. of a certain bill shown, as it appears, at the following leet, by the master, brethren and sisters of the Trinity gild, concerning £10, which they paid of their desire and will to the prior of S. Mary's Cathedral in exoneration of the community of the city of Coventry; which £10 the mayor and community are bound to yield every year to the prior and convent. For which £10 it is conceded, that the said master, brethren and sisters shall have and hold divers fields in severalty; and that the said master, brethren and sisters shall pay every year £10 to the said prior and convent in exoneration of the mayor and community, as it appears more plainly below.

THE GILD FIELDS.

[¹On July 12, 1421, all underwritten were called to, and assembled in,

S. Mary's Hall, by the mayor's requisition, to enquire about certain fields of the Trinity Gild, whether they are several or no, viz. Poddy-croft, Stivichall-Hiron, Long-croft and Bateman's-acre, who indeed say that on Thursday after Michaelmas 8 Ric. II, at a leet held at Coventry before J. Marton, mayor (etc.) it was ordained and granted that the Trinity gild master should have and hold those fields in severalty, and that the gild master should pay as long as he pleased £10 on the community's behalf, as appears more fully in the same leet. Therefore by these honest and legal men, chosen for this cause by the mayor, it was ordained and confirmed—that the said fields be held the said saynt Andrew day, when the said John Grace had prechid, hit was said he was not licentiate, nor noo lycens had to preche, notwithstanding he hym-selffe said in euery sermon þat he made þat he was licencieate and lycens had to preche. And at the same day at afturnone when Evensong was doon, Ric. Croseby, priour of saynt Mary church in Couentre, was in purpose to haue gone in-to þe pulpit in the Trinite churche, as the comen voise was then, to haue denouneyd acursyd all tho þat herd the sermon of the said John Grace; and so, what thurgh þe gouernance of the priour, and the sayng of oone Master John Bredon,¹ frere of the Gray frers in Couentre, castyng ouerthwart wordes amonges the people, grett seyng was a-mong the people þat þe priour and frer Bredon wold haue cursid all tho þat herdon the said John Grace preche; ffor the wich sayng þe priour nor þe said frere Bredon wold nott goo oute of the church vnto þe tyme þat the maiour com to hem, notwithstanding they myght haue goone well I-noughze whethur thei wold, & þat wott Allmyghty God. but it is said he was not licentiate.

There is a great saying that the prior and Friar John Bredon will curse the audience of John Grace.

On account of the fuss made by the clergy, erroneous reports arise.

So there is trouble made by the king's Council about the supposed riot, and a letter written by them.

WILL. CROSS' CHARTER.

Jan. 13, 1434.

[Let all present and to come know that we W. Crosse, ferryman, W. Legburne and J. Holbargh, chaplains, have delivered, enfeffed and by this present quadripartite charter confirmed to J. Garton, mercer, the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, a tenement with shops and all its appurtenances in the Bayly-lane, which J. Mokes formerly held, situated between the prior's tenement on one side, and that formerly held by D. Corby on the other side in breadth, and stretches itself in length from the said street to the prior's land called the Earl's orchard.

[We deliver also, and have confirmed to the said J. Garton

THE WORKERS IN IRON.

Sept. 14, 1435.
A bill delivered to the mayor,

⁵ Hit is to haue in mynde that in the fest of the Exaltacion of the Holy Crosse a bille foloweng was delyuered to John Euerdon, meire of the Cite of Couentre, in thes wordes :

To the Reuerent Meire of the Cite of Couentre & to halle the wurthy men of the same; for-alsomyche as hit is necessarie & nedefull to euery gouernour of Cite & of Town to se suche rule & gouernaunce may be hadde be the whiche the kynges peapull may be truly rulede & demened: Be hit known to you that but yif certen ordenaunces of Craftes withe-in this Cite, & in speciall the Craft of wírdrawerz, be takon good hede to, hit is like myche of the kynges pepull, & in speciall poor chapmen & Clothemakers, in tyme comeng shullon be gretely hyndered; and as hit may be supposed the principall cause is like to be amonges hem that han all the Craft in her own hondes, That is to sey, smythiers, brakemen, gurdelmen & Cardwírdrawerz; for he that hathe all thes Craftes may, offendyng his consience, do myche harme. First in The smethyng, yif he be necligent & mysrule his Iron, that he wirkithe, be onkynd hetes or elles in oder maner, the whiche, when hit is so spilt, is not to make no maner chapmannes ware of, Neuertelater for his own eese he will com to his Brakemon & sey to hym;—“Here is a ston of rough-iron, the whiche must be tendurly cherysshet.” & then the Brakemon most nedes do his maisters comaundement, and dothe all that is in hym; & then when the Brakemon hathe don his ocupacion, That that the mayster supposithe wil-not in no wyse be holpen atte gurdell, Then hit shall be solde for hoke wire. And when hit is made in hokes and shulde serue the ffissher to take físshe, when hit comythe to distresse, Then for febulness hit all-to brekithe, and thus is the ffissher foule disseyued to hym¹ grete harme. And then that wire that the mayster supposithe wille be cherished atte gurdell, he shall com to his girdulmon and sey to hym as he seid to the brakemon:—“Lo, here is a stryng or ij, that hathe ben mys gouerned atte herthe; my brakemon hathe don his deuer, I prey the do now thyne.” & so he dothe as his maister biddethe hyme. And then he gothe to his cardwírdrawer, & seithe the same to hym, and he dothe as his maister biddithe hym. And then when the Cardmaker hathe bought this wire thus dissayvably wrought, he may not know hit tille hit com to the Crokyng,² & Then hit crachithe and farithe foule; so the Cardmaker is right heuy ther-of, but neuer-the-later he sethe be-cause hit is Cutte, he must nedes helpe hymself in eschueng his losse, he makithe cardes ther-of as well as he may. And when the Cardes ben solde to the clothemaker & shuldou be ocupied, anon the tethe brekon & fallon out, so the clothemaker is foule disseyued. Wherefore, sirs, atte reuerens of God in fortheryng of the kynges true lege peapull & in eschueng of all disseytes, Weithe this mater wysely, & ther as ye see disseyte is like to be, therto settithe remedy be your wyse discessions. For ye may right welle know be experience that & the smythier & the brakemen¹ wern to-gider & no mo, and the cardwirdrawers & the Middlemen² to-gider and no mo, Then hit were to suppose that ther shuld not so myche disseyuabull wire be wrought & sold as ther is; ffor & the Craft were severed in the maner as hit [is] seide aboue, Then the Cardwirdrawers and the myddelmen most nedes bye the wire³ that they shull wirche of the smythiers, and yif the cardwiredrawer were ones or thies disseyued withe ontrewre wire he wolde be warre, and then wold he sey vnto the smythier that he bought that wire of:—"Sir, I hadde of you late badde wire. Sir, amend your honde, or, in feithe, I wille no more bye of you." And then the smythier, lest he lost his Customers, wolde make true goode; and then, withe the grase of Godd, The Craft shuld amend, and the kynges peapull [be] not disseyued withe ontrewre goode.

¶ The whiche bille the seid meyre atte lete holdon the Monday next after the fest of seynt Mich[ael] theennes next sueng at Couentre send to all the wurthymen of the seyde lete to take her avyse theropon, and ther the seyde bille afore hem was radde, herde and vnderstonden; And for-alsomyche as the mater of this bille is grevous & Nuyefull⁴ to the comen pepull, and for oder greuaunse vnto the seid wurthymen attis seid lete shewed, They willeng goode ordenaunses and gouernanses in this seyde

¹ Not in N.E.D. in this sense. v. Gloss. Mr. Stevenson points out to me that a brakeman was evidently the artificer who converted iron into wire, coarse at first, then drawn finer by the card-wiredrawers. The "brake" was his tool or implement.

QUARREL BETWEEN THE WEAVERS AND CORVESERS.

¹ffor-also moche as hit was notified & Relacion made vnto þe meire, that is to sey Ric. Braytoft, þat certen debates & stryves wer had betwen the Crafte of Weuers & the Crafte of Coruisors, The said maiour in keping of the peace, and allso willyng good rule & rest to be had betwen the said Craftys, mad to com a-for hym bothe the said Craftis charging hem to kep the peace, and allso to bryng hym in Wrytyng the mattur & greuance þat was betwen them. And so the Thursday next aftur the fest of saynet Math[ew]² thapostle the said Craftis brought vnto the maiour in wrytyng the cause of ther greuance. Submittyng themselfe with due submission to abyde the rule of the maiour & his Counsell. Wherupon the maiour & his counsell, whos [names] heraftur folowen, the complaints of bothe parties herd & vnderstond, haue ordenyd & prouyded that the Crafte of coruysers shuld Restore and satisfie vnto John Wamburne of Couentre, weuer, xld., þat is to say the said xld., the hoode & the paire of Glouys þat wer taken away from John Feythyng, seruaunt vnto the said John Wamburne, when the seid John Feithyng was betyn. And ouer þat the seid Craft of Coruysers shull pay for the betyng & for anoþer trespas that was doon in the house of John Symondes, Coruiser, in despyte of the weuers vj s. viij d.

Allso the said maiour & his counsell orden that þe Crafte of Coruisers shall pay to Thom. Burdeux, weuer, Cs.³ in satisfaccion of the trespas doon to hym the tyme þat he was beeton be certen persons of the said Crafte of coruisers, for the wich he was in dispair of his lyffe. Allso þat the Crafte of weuers for dyuers offences made by the coruisers to dyuers men of the weuers shall haue Cs., the said Cs. to be eton and dronken among the fellauship of both Craftys.

Feb. 26 or Sept. 24, 1444. "Varyans betwen þe weavers and Coruersers." The weavers and corvesers bring a written account of their mutual grieuances, submitting to the arbitration of the mayor and council.

The corvesers are to restore 40d. a hood, gloves, and 6s. 8d.,

and 100s.

in compensa- tion; and another 100s. to be spent at a feast between the two crafts.

³ "The said Cs. to be eton and dronken" obliterated.

And on no account shall new names for cloths be used.

J. Wamburn, weaver, to make satisfaction to the corversers;

and the craft of weavers to contribute 20s. to a drinking.

Names of mayor's council in this affair, 36 in all.

Those new-fangled names to be tabooed or 20s. fine.

Allso þei orden that noo man of the Crafte of Coruysers fro this tyme forward shall vse ne new namys as in Callyng blake of lyre¹ Queyres anamelynges ne non oþer suche namys of noo thyng þat longyth to þe² Crafte.

Allso thei orden þat John Wamburn, weuer, for hymselfe & William Pars, weuer, for the offence þat thei made to John Maynard shall pay to John Maynard & Wylliam Ward, coruysers, xld. in satisfaccion of thoffens & trespas þat wer made to John Maynard & William Ward.

Allso þei orden that all the Crafte of weuers shall pay and satisfie to þe Crafte of Coruysers xx s. for thoffens & trespas don to Benet Stockton, coruysers, in dispite of the Crafte of coruysers; and þat xx s. to be disposid in mete & drynk a-mong the felaship of both Craftes.

FOREWORD.

PART II of the Leet Book contains 324 pages as against 256 of Part I, an increase of 68 pages, due to Dr. Furnivall's desire that we should not break into the career of the rebel, Laurence Saunders, with whose disappearance from history this part accordingly ends. The matter contained in this division of the Leet Book is, perhaps, more varied, fuller of personal details and of items of historical interest, than was the case with its predecessor, and as it was thought that Part I suffered in not possessing some preliminary guide to its contents, I determined that Part II should not also be defective in this respect. The following slight introduction, which will not anticipate to any appreciable extent the final survey of the work in Part IV, is merely intended to enable the reader to obtain as readily as may be, some idea of the most striking features of that portion of the Leet Book that deals with the period between 1451 and 1496.

As Coventry was one of the chief Lancastrian strongholds of the realm, a frequent residence of the Court in the early days of the Wars of the Roses, and later a centre for the operations of the Kingmaker, this period is unusually rich in details connected with fortification, military history, and leading personalities who played their part in that time of strife. The strengthening of the city's defences in 1451 with cleansing of ditches, repairing of walls, and purchase of guns,¹ the reception given to Henry VI that same year,² the pageantry at the welcome to Queen Margaret in 1456,³ the record of the council held in 1457,⁴ the commission concerning the attainted Yorkist lords received in 1460,⁵ all point to the ascendancy of the Lancastrian party in the early days of the conflict.

Later the city veered round to York, and a welcome with pageantry was accorded to Edward IV after the battle of Towton.⁶ Warwick's machinations in 1469 and his volte-face in favour of Lancaster in the following year again threw the city into the conflict between the warring houses, and in 1471 Edward IV came fresh from his victory at Tewkesbury to mulct the city with a fine of 500 marks for the part the citizens had taken with his enemies. With reference to Robin of Redesdale's rebellion in 1469 the Leet Book scribe lays the scene of the Woodvilles' execution at Gosford Green, whereas other authorities say that the father and brother of Edward's queen suffered death at Kenilworth; while in the account of the Lancastrian revival in 1470¹ Warwick and Clarence are said to have come to Coventry from the west with 30,000 men, before they went to London.² The citizens hastened to make their peace with the victorious Yorkists, and welcomed Prince Edward, afterwards Edward V, with as gay a show as they had previously prepared for Margaret of Anjou.³ The later Yorkist period is marked by a series of royal interferences with local affairs, an encroachment, it would seem, at first resented by the citizens,⁴ and by frequent appeals for money to aid the king in his wars. The rule of the House of the White Roſe appropriately closes with an allusion to Bosworth, "the field of King Richard."⁵

The city was also filled with internal troubles. The close corporation that ruled it was often both unpopular and inefficient. The craft companies resented the governing body's authoritative interference in their affairs,⁶ and sought to control their members by suing them for oath-breach in courts spiritual removed from the jurisdiction of the city. The dyers, a craft to which the rebel Saunders belonged, were a particularly stiff-necked and troublesome body.⁷ To add to the general unrest disputes concerning encroachments of the common pastures, of which we have seen traces in Part I (p. 45) begin in 1469 to occupy a prominent place in the records;⁸ and an interminable quarrel between the mayor and commonalty on the one hand and a Whitley landowner—whose name I once read Bristow, but after many comparisons and much debate have decided to spell Briscow—on the other, fretted the citizens until they rose in rebellion.⁹ The practice of surcharging the commons by powerful graziers was denounced by Laurence Saunders, whose career opens in 1480, the year of his chamberlainship, when he presented an appeal concerning this matter¹⁰ to the Prince of Wales. Again and again he spoke in protest about the alienation of the citizens' rights of common. The most interesting and individual figure in the whole history of mediæval

Coventry, Saunders after being fined, imprisoned, cautioned by the Prince of Wales' council, bound over to keep the peace, vanishes into the Fleet prison defiant to the last. Undoubtedly he had a great following in the city; and in the verses composed by some rhymster of his party there crystallizes the popular discontent of years.¹

Up and down the Leet Book are scattered countless allusions of interest to students of legal, ecclesiastical, topographical or social history. Such are the mention of a widower's life-interest in a dead wife's property when issue had been born of the marriage "by the Courtesy of England";² the sealing of the standard measures;³ the positions of churchwardens;⁴ the building of S. Michael's church;⁵ the treatment of the spinners;⁶ the regulation concerning morals under Henry VII;⁷ the order against wooden chimneys;⁸ Margaret of Anjou's manner of riding;⁹ the distribution of the holy cake;¹⁰ while on account of their early occurrence, unusual sense or rarity, the words "spayre,"¹¹ "purpensed,"¹² "experimently"¹³ and "reteign-dour"¹⁴ are remarkable.

The mayor's letter.

A lettre sende to the meyre fro my lord of Warwic the xij day of Juyll.

Ryhgt trusty and wil-belovyd frende [see duplicate for continuation].²

² Insignificant variations between the two copies are not noted. The mayor may have been a personal supporter of Warwick, but the second copy addressed to servants and well-willers implies a wide-spread agitation.

Item, dominus Humfridus Nevyle, miles,⁸ fuit decollatus in le north countre eodem anno, & Charlus frater eius & balliuus de Duram eodem tempore.

² Will. Herbert, created Earl of Pembroke, 1468.

³ S. James' is July 25. Authorities declare July 26 to have been the date.

⁴ July 28. The execution took place by Warwick's order.

⁵ Father of Queen Elizabeth Woodville.

⁷ It was a quarrel between Stafford and Pembroke just before Edgcote, and the consequent leading off of the former's men that weakened Pembroke's forces and caused his defeat.

BRISCOW AND THE COMMON LANDS.

Will. Bryskow set a wall of ston in the West-orchard vndyr a hows ouer the water of Shyrburn to ferre in the comyn reuer; Wherapon the meyre with hys brytheryn & there consell callyd the sherchers, sworn to trie the trowthe by-twyx party & party, & they by there othe sayde the wall was sette to ferre in the comyn reuer by a fote & more. Wherfore the sayde wall was take up a-gayne.

Briscow encroaches with a wall on the

It is pulled down;

Wherfore the sayde Wyll. Bryskowe toke a wrytt in Warwyk-shyre a-gaynes the meyre & the comynalte of Couentre, Wherfore they rememberyd that the sayde Wyllyam was sufferyd to ouerley the comyn bytwyx Whytley & Couentre, & hade no comyn there, & sayde he shuld not so doe. & the meyre with his counsell sende for the sayde William to yeve hym knowlache that he shuld shewe what he hade to clayme suche comyn by; & there the meyre with hys counsell & the seyde Wyllyam were a-greyd that Sir Joh. Nedam, knyght & justyse, shuld cum to the grounde & bothe partyes shewe to hym there evydens. & on the evyn of Seynt Androwe the apostell the yer of kyng Edward the fowyrthe after the conquest the ix yere, the sayd *Sir Joh. THE PRIOR AND THE COMMON LANDS.

Dec. 6.
Certain simple persons, commoners, break down hedges and open closes, notably Prior's Waste. The prior is angered, but is eventually appeased by the grant of a piece of land near the New Gate.

Item, on Seynt Nicholas day in the same yere, the comyns of this Cite, that were sympull persons, wenton & cast downe with-owt the Gray-fryre yate serten gardens³ that were of the town rent & fylde & closys of dyuers menys, and of the priores a lesow callyd the Prioires-wast,⁴ brake vp the hegis & in diuers places cast downe the dyke. Wherefore the priour was gretely grevyd & purposyd to have trowbelyd with the Cite. And the meyre with hys consell entretyd the sayde priour to shewe more ffavour to the Cite in-as-muche as no men off grett reputation was wylling to that brekyng; & so plesyd the priour, & promysyd hym to have the sayd Prioires-wast in seuerall al tymes of the yere for euer to hym & hys successours; and also that the sayde priour shuld haue in seuerall al tymes of the yere & for euer-more a parcell of grounde lyggyng *with*owt the Newe-yate that was a

THE MEASURES.

Exchequer Memoranda Easter term 1474 in the roll on the side of the King's Remembrancer.

On May 12 in that term comes before the Barons a certain J. Wyldgrys of Coventry in his own person and showed the Court here two iron rods, one a yard long, another an ell long, used for measuring saleable cloth and other measurable things to be sold in the city, begging through the favour of the court in the city's name that these rods be placed by the side of the standard of the Exchequer, to prove if the same yard and ell were legal measures and corresponded to the Exchequer standard or no. Whereupon on the same day the said yard and ell having been compared with the Exchequer yard, it appears to the barons that the said yard brought by J. Wyldegrys is of standard length, and that the ell is equal to the length of a yard and a quarter according to the standard yard of the Exchequer. The same yard and ell thereafter, that is to say on May 20, 1474, are delivered sealed with the Exchequer seal to J. Wyldegrys, here present in the name of the city, to be used as lawful measures agreeing with the standard of the Exchequer, henceforward in the city for measuring cloth and other things.

ffirst, that where it is specified in the Tripartite¹ that pe Priour and Couent and their successours haue their rentes by all pe Towne, as well Rent sek² as rent seruice, of right to them dewe, with other, as there hit appereth, certen rentez be withdrawe by the Trinite Gilde, Corporis Christi and pe wardens of this Cite, as shal-be shewed to you be writyng, of the which they desyre satisfaccion & restitucion as lawe & consciens requireth.

Also as it is in the seid Tripartite graunted & relesed by the Maire, cominalte and euery singler persone of pe same Town, lond-holdyng and other, to the same Priour and Couent & their successours all their right in the parke of pe same Priour and Couent of Whitmore,³ and in all her oder Maners, landes, & all her other enclosures, approwementes then approwed in her propre soyle, in the which the ffre tenauntes of pe same Town of Couentre of olde tyme hadden & claymed her comyn; which is nowe broken by the Mayre & cominalte be an ordynaunce made anno primo Regis Henrici sexti,⁴ which ordenaunce was neuer assented by the predecessours of pe Priour nowe beyng, nor by hym. Wherefore the Priour & Couent nowe beyng desiren restitucion of such wrongedoyng.

Also the ixth yere of the reign of our liege lorde the kyng nowe beyng, Will. Saunders then beyng Maire of pis Cite, diuers vndisposed people breke the yates of his pastures at Whitmore & felled down his wode, & breke his hegges there, & in oþer places to the gret hurt & harme & to the gret rebuke of pe seid Priour & Couent, and neuer was satisfied for pe hurte nor trespasse, nõr myght not be suffered to sue the mysdoers; wherefore they desire satisfaccion.

One of the terms of the Tripartite as to Whitmore is broken by order of Leet 1422-3.

In 1469 the people broke down the prior's fences, for which no satisfaction has been made.

Also þe seid people dayly with their dong, fy[1]the & swepyng throwen in the Comien Ryuer so stoppen the fflodezates & the water in the Priorye that their Mille is vtterly letted to go; and be filthe ther suche evell eyre¹ is that he, his Brethern & all other ffolkes there be hurte, which [is] don ayenst a statute² made of pis matier to lese at every defalt x li.

The fith in the river stops the mill from working and injures the health of the convent.

Also the people of this Cite yerely in somer throwen down & beren away the vnderwode of þe seid Priour, & birches, hollyes, ooke, hawthorn & oper at Whitmore parke & his oper closez, & breken his hegges to his hurtes yerely Cs.

The prior's underwood is borne away and his fences broken to his yearly damage 100s.

Also the people yerely in Hasil-wode, which is his grownde, throwen don thornes, ffirs, fern, brome; diggen turves, & such other; where be the tripartite they owe nothyng to haue there but comien of pasture to their bestes cominable, & clay and sande for the reparacions of their housez in the Cite.

Thorns, turves, etc., taken away wrongfully in Hasilwood.

Also the people of þe Cite wrongfully seyn that the Priour overcharges the comien with his shepe & Catell to þe hurte of þe Cite. This saying cannot be iustefyed, for, be lawe of þis lande, the lorde of þe waste soyle may surcharge and put þerin what nombre hym lykes, & is not admesurable, but þe Cominers be not of suche condicion nor benefice, for they ben admesurable, and to be extented at certen. And yf þe priour luste to haue þe seid Matier vnderstanden at large, the seid people owe not to haue their rule so large as they haue.³

The prior does not, as reported, surcharge the common, as he is lord of the soil.

Ordinary commoners, however, ought not to exceed the number of their stint.

Also the people of þe Cite dwellyng withoute Gossefordeyate maken brigges & pathes into Harnale-feld & stoppen the dyches with þe wedes of their gardeyns & other swepyng of their houses, and by the seid brigges & pathes bryngen in horses & other Catell be nyghtes, & so ete þe pasture, & some tyme sher the grasse of þe same pasture to the hurte of þe tenauntes of the seid Priour yerely xx s.

The people without Gosford Gate allow their cattle to eat the prior's tenants' grass. Fences are broken,

They hunt

Also the people of þe seid Cite huntene & hawken within the warden of the seid Priour in Couentre, Whitmore, & many other placez within the shire of Couentre & withoute, & hit distroyen ayen þe lawe & his Chartour of warden.

The people break open the prior's several grounds,

Also þe people of þe Cite brekyng his seuerall grounde within hym, called the Orchard, maken comen hie weyes out of Spetelmore thorough his gardens there, and breke vp his postern yates, wherby his catell strayeth owte, and ofte tymes is lost. And also the people maken the same seuerall grounde a Sportyng-place with schotyng & oper games; and hurten his grasse. And when they ben chalenged by his seruauntes they gyven hem schort langage, saying that they will haue hit their sportyng-place.

² Also the people of this Citie hurten the ffyshe in Swanneswel-pole be þeir wasshyng ther, which they don wrongfully; and also ffysshene be nyght & by day the said pole, and other his poles by stalthe, that by diuerse yeres the seid Priour & his predecessours han lost ffysse to the value of C li.

Also the seid Prior & his predecessours ben hurted in diuerse places by setting of þe town wall vpon their ground; by the which her lyvelode is defalked¹ yerely to the summe of xlvijs. viij d., from þe tyme that John Smythar was Mayre of þis Citie vnto this tyme; of þe which the prior desireth restitucion, and howe he shalbe answered here-after.

Also the pepull of the seid Citie carryen their Donge, Ramell² & swepyng of their houses & leyen hit vnto the walles & yate of the Priours orchard without the Coke-strete-yate, and stoppen vp the wey ther, that the prior may not haue his Carriage thorough his orchard as he hath vsed to haue. Where of late tyme they leyde ther nothyng but swepyng of their houses, which was carryed a-wey by men of the Contrey to donge their londe; and now be-cause they ley þere her Ramell ther will no man Carry a-wey there as they were wont to doo, and so hit encreseth dayly more & more to the hyndraunce & grete hurt of the seid Priour.

Also þe seid Priour & his predecessours han yerely paid x li. to þe murage of this Citie, where of trouthe save of þeir good will thei ought to pay no peny; and where promise was made to the priour nowe beyng that all þe Revenuez of the lyvelode for the Murage, which amounteth to make vj perche by yere, shuld haue ben made vpon his grounde, all oder parties leyd on part,³ which nowe passeth nott ij perche by yere, but employe hit to oder reparacions of þe seid town wall; which causeth the seid Priour gretly to be hurted, and contrary to the graunte of the Chartur of the Murage.

Also Laur. Saunders, nowe beyng Chamberleyne, with other diuerse vndisposed persons, noysen & sklaunderen the seid priour in the Citie, saying that he kepeth diuerse pastures in seueralte, which owen to be comen; of the Wherefore that ye please to se these matiers reformed within your-self, accordyng to right, for elles the seid Prior must sewe elles-where for remedye, or elles suffer his house to take ouer grete wronge and hurt: which he will nott do by hys wyll. that their Mill is vtterly letted to go & causeth euell eire¹ to the hurte of the Priour, his Brethern & other folkes there ayens a statute perof made etc. :—To this article the seid Maire & his Brethern seyn that they maken dayly als gret diligens as they can to knowe the stoppers of the seid Comien Ryuer, which is on of the most Iuels pat the Cite hath, and ffewe offenders or non can be perceyued, and when eny be perceyved they ben punysshed aftur their deserve. And fferther enquerre is made at euery lete holden within the Cite, and dayly serch made be pe aldermen of euery warde of pe Cite adioynng to the seid Ryuer for suche mysdoers so that defalt in pat partie of reason can not be arretted² in pe seid Maire, his Brethern, nor officers of pe Cite etc.

As-to the v^{te} article conteynng that pe people of pe Cite yerely in somur throwen down & beren away pe vnderwode of the seid priour as Birches, holyes, Oke, hauthorn & other at Whitmore parke & other closez & breken his hegges :—To this the seid Maire & his Brethern seyn that yerely the Maistirs of euery crafte of pe Cite be commaundement of the Mair chargen the people of their Crafte to restreygn such dedes to be don be theym & peir seruauntes in eschewyng the doughtfull censures of pe Chirch & also to be punysshed be the temporell lawe. And yf eny vndisposed creature offend to the Contrarie ayenst their will no defalt perin oweth to be ascryued in them, remembryng pat the people of euery gret Cite, as London & other Citeez, yerely in somur doon harme to diuers lordes & gentyles hauyng wodes & Groves nygh to such Citees be takyng of boughes & treez, and zit the lordes & gentils suffren sych dedes ofte tymes of their goode will. And ofte tymes pe offenders can-not be knowen wher-thorough punysshement myght be don etc.

As-to the vj^{te} article conteynng that pe people yerely in Hasilwode, which pe Priour seith is his grounde, shuld throwe downe thornes, ffrres,³ ffern, Brome, diggen turves & such other, where be the Tripartite the people owe⁴ nothyng to haue there but pasture to their bestes which evils the mayor and aldermen make daily great diligence to diminish by the punishment of offenders.

the mayor and council object to the interpretation of the Tripartite, and argue that the general words "and other things" offer a loophole for turf-digging etc.

All the inhabitants have had unlimited common in Hasilwood for beasts commonable and not-commonable, as swine and goats.

Art. 7.
As to surcharging

comynable and Cley & sand for the reparacion of their howsez in the Cite:—To this article the seid Maire & his Brethern seyn that the wordes in the seid Tripartite be not so speciall & streyt as the seid prior taketh hem, but þe wordes ben as he reherseth; and ouer that thus:— save that ¹þe people of ¹þe Comiens of the same town may digge gravell & sande for þe reparacions & redresse of their houses & walles & oper thynges and per donge perto putt as a-fore this tyme haue be vsed at all tymes nedefull. In which wordes generall ' & oper thynges ' ys vnderstanden thornes, firres, feron, Brome & Turves; & in proffe perof the people of the Citie, afore þe makyng of the seid Tripartite, at pat tyme & sythen without denyer haue had & owyed² all the seid thynges. And the seid Meire & his brethern by protestacion, not knowyng the grounde in Haselwode to be the seid priours, seyn pat all the inhabitantes within the Citie of Couentre, be the tyme that no mannes mynde is þe contrarie, haue had & vsed their Comien to all their bestes *comienally*³ & not comenable without noumbur be all the yere; and nott only for bestes comenably, for till nowe late (nott past xvj yer) that for diuerse causez swyne & gette were restreynd to be within the Citie and depastur without þe Citie, the inhabitantes hadden their swyne & Geete without noumber goyng be all the yere in the seid grounde, and zett owen & mayn haue at their pleasur as well as oper Catell comenable etc.

⁴ As-to the vij article conteynyng that þe people of the Citie wrongfully seyn that þe priour ouercharges þe comien with his shepe and oper catell to the hurt of þe Citie, wich seyng the seid Priour thynketh can-not be justified, for he seith that the lawe of the lande ys that the lorde of the soyle may surcharge and put perin what noumber hit lykes,⁵ and is not admesurable, but þe comeners ben nott of such condicion nor benefite, for þey ben admesurable, and to be extended at certeyn.⁶ And yf the priour lust to haue the seid matier vnderstanden at large þe seid

THE PRIOR'S REPLICATION.

[Rejoinder of the prior and convent to the mayor's answer concerning the rents.

[First, as to the rents issuing from divers tenements, the prior and convent say that they have not been paid by the ministers of the Trinity gild as is supposed by the response, but that the gild is in arrears to them for 30 years and more, as appears in the said prior's bill, £31 12s. 6d.

[And further they say that neither they nor their officers have received annually for 40 years, as is supposed in the Replicacio Tho. Dirram, Prioris & Conuentus ecclesie etc. ad responcionem Maioris etc. ville de Couentria quoad redditus.

In primis, Idem prior & Conuentus dicunt quoad redditus exeuntes de diuersis tenementis Gilde S. Trinitatis quod non sunt soluti per Ministros Gilde prout per responsionem supponitur, sed quod Gilda predicta est a retro in arreragiis illis debitis per xxx^{ta} annos & vltra, vt patet in billa dicti prioris, xxxj li. xij s. vj d.

response, the sum of 21*d.* amounting to the sum of 6 marks, in addition to the sum claimed by the prior. Therefore no such restitution is by any means owing to the said gild.

[Item, the same prior, etc. say that J. Braunston held in fee one acre and one rood of land in Keresley, formerly Sim. Bulbek's, rendering annually thence 1*s.* 3*d.* to the prior.

[And the same John held at will divers parcels of land in Keresley, as appeared in the same prior's rental, which are within the said prior's fee.

[And as to the meadow in Styffordhale, the same prior says that all that meadow lying at the end of his lands there belongs to the same prior and convent by reason of his land aforesaid in right of his church, and belonged [to them] time out of mind, until the prior and convent and their predecessors were disseised by Tho. Wilgris and Joh. Wilgris by command of the mayor and community of Coventry.

[And as to the rents supposed in the said response by the mayor to be well and faithfully paid, the said prior says they are not duly paid, as is before supposed.

& vnus denariorum, attingentem ad summam sex marcarum, vltra summam per priorem clamatam. Ideo nulla talis restitucio dicte Gilde omnino debetur.

Item, iidem prior etc. dicunt quod Joh. Braunston tenuit in feodo j acram & j Rodam terre in Keresley, quondam Simonis Bulbek,¹ reddendo annuatim inde priori etc. xv d.

Et idem Joh. tenuit ad voluntatem diuersas parcelas terre in Keresley, vt [p]atet in rentali eiusdem prioris. Que sunt infra feodum dicti prioris.

Et quoad pratum in Styffordhale iidem Prior etc. dicunt quod totum illud pratum iacens ad finem terrarum suarum ibidem pertinet eisdem priori & Conuentui racione terre sue predicte, vt in iure sue ecclesie, & a toto tempore cuius contrarii memoria hominum non existit pertinuit, quousque iidem Prior & Conuentus & predecessores sui fuerunt disseisiti per Tho. Wilgris & Joh. Wilgris per preceptum Maioris & Communitatis Couentrie.

Et quoad redditus in dicta responsione per maiorem etc. suppositos bene & fideliter solutos iidem prior etc. dicunt quod non nec debito modo sunt soluti, vt prius supponitur.

[And as to the other rents asked from the Corpus Christi gild, viz. 3s. from a tenement in Cross-Cheaping by Slepers-lane, formerly belonging to S. Damas, and 3s. 4d. from the half of a messuage in the street leading from Broadgate towards Cross-Cheaping, and 8d. from a tenement in Smithford Street, formerly belonging to J. Damas, the chaplain, the prior and convent say that the tenements are within their fee, and that the prior and his predecessors had seisin of the rents after the time-limit of the Assize of novel disseisin.

[And thus the prior and convent say that they and their predecessors were seised of all the other rents specified in the said reply after the limitation aforesaid. All these things they are ready to verify.]

Maire of Bristoll Will. Cannyng, Joh. Vyell shirrif of Bristoll & Wal. Darby, Customer.

the officers of Bristoll levy a toll on Coventry men's wares, called keyage.

This allowance notwithstanding the officers of Bristoll aforeseid compelled diuers of Couentre be coharcion of distresse to pay for euery Tonne bought be theym ther iij d. callyng that Charge Cayage,¹ that is to say, for the passage of their ware fro the selar vppon the key there vnto the watir.

Complaint is made to Hen. VII at Kenilworth, whither come the Bristoll officers.

ffor which wrong so doon the Maire of Couentre sent dyuers tymes to þe Meire of Bristoll for reformacion in pat partie; and for the same dyuers communicacions were appoynted to be had be þe Counceill on both parties at London, which was had & kept & no direccion had nor taken. Wherefore þe seid Maire of Couentre let shewe the matier to the kynges grace beyng at Kylyngworth. Vppon which shewyng a priue seall was graunt ayenst þe shirrif & Baillyfs of Bristoll to appere afore þe kynges grace and his honorable Counceill furthwyth to answer in þe premissez, vppon which the Recordour & Townclerk of Bristoll appered at Kylyngworth aforeseid þe Munday in þe Octabis of S. John Baptiste [8 Hen. VII] befor þe seid lordes.

July 1, 1493.

At which tyme was there shewd for þe parte of þe seid Cite that Couentre nowe beyng a Cite afor tyme of mynde was a Borough, & sith pat tyme so hath continied; be which tyme the inhabitauntes of þe same & the liberte ther-of amonges many gret liberteez & ffraunchisez to theym graunted, vsed & enioyed, they haue had fre recourse of with their merchaundisez to by & sell frely without eny toll or other custome to kyng or kynges Mynyster due therfor paying, gyffyng, or zilding in all Citeez, Boroughes, Townes, portes & other places thorough-out þe roialme of Englund, Wales & Ireland, be londe & be watir: Of which liberte & fredome they haue be & ben allowed in London, Hampton, Bristoll, & many other places. This notwithstanding the officers of Bristoll nowe of late han compelled diuers Merchauntes of Couentre to paye with theym kayage, as is aforeseid etc., of which they aske reformacion & restitucion etc.

Coventry pleads toll-freedom throughout the realm, notwithstanding this, Bristoll demands keyage;

To which the Recordour of Bristoll answered & seid :— that he withseith not þe ffraunchis of Couentre, nor the allowance þerof had at Bristoll þe seid xlvij 3ere of Kyng Edward þe iij^{de}, nor that þe seid payement of kayage is not ayenst theire seid fredome & liberte, forasmorch (sic) as the key of Bristoll is of newe made both for þe ease of þe Merchaunt denisen as the¹ Merchaunt stranger, which cost gret goode the makyng & gret charge the 3erely kepyng þerof, to which the inhabitauntes of Couentre there vsyng þe same key ought of right to be contributorye etc, not hurtyng their ffraunchis etc.

pleading that the quay is of recent construction and hence not included in the Coventry exemption :

To which was answered for þe partie of Couentre aforseid that inasmoch as they withseid not þe allowance of þe ffraunchis aforetyme which will that they shall nothyng pay to kyng ne kynges Ministre, and this kayage is parcell of theire fee-ferme þat they pay to the kyng, in which case they ought to be discharged herof etc. Wherefore they desire that they may þerof be discharged.

which the Coventry men deny, asserting that the keyage is included in the Bristol firm, and hence covered by their exemption.

Then þe seid Recordour of Bristoll seid þat þe allowance of þe ffraunchis of Couentre had at Bristoll, as is aforeseid, was not allowed be so generall termes, and there shewed þe copie of þe writte De non molestando sued in þe tyme of Edward þe iij^{de} & þe allowance þeruppon, which was no more but sint quieti de Theoloneo, pontagio, pauagio & Muragio, & no more. To which was answerd & seid þat at that tyme be þat allowance in tho termes they were discharged of eny thyng there paying with which at þat tyme they were content; nor at that tyme there was other charge then asked them, but such as be the same wordes they were then discharged, & hit is sufficient þis wordes pauage & Murage to discharge of þis kayage þat is nowe asked, in-asmoch as the reparacion þerof stondesth nowe be þe wall þer made in defens of þe see, and in pauyng of the wharf there etc.

Bristol argues that the Coventry folk are only quit of toll, bridge-money, paving-money, wall-money; whereto Coventry replies that keyage is comprehended in murage and pavage inasmuch as repairs to the sea-wall and wharf pavement are included.

And then the seid Recorder toke newe title to fortifie þe paying of kayage be prescripcion seyng that they haue vsed tyme oute of mynde to paye for euery Tonne iij d. etc, & so wold bynde them be þat measne.

Bristol pleads prescription;

Wheruppon þe seid Laurence offered suerte þat were not sufficient, as appereth in þe boke of Counceill, seyng þat he wold fynde no oper, what-soeuer fell þeruppon, with oper seducious wordes be hym ther vttered, as ther appereth in þe seid booke of Counceill, wherfore he remayned still in prison. Wheruppon ij seducious billes were founde i-sette vppon þe Mynster durre in þe feste of seynt Anne, & a noþer was cast etc. Wherof the tenour here-after ensuen :—

Bishop of Rochester, and he is summoned before the king's council.

Laurence offers insufficient surety and remains in prison.

Verses are found on Jul. 26 on the minster door.

Jhesus be your spede, }
I hope hit be nede, } Thus to pray.

You have hunted the hare, }
You holde him in a snare ; } Hit had be as goode nay.

The hare is in a snare, i. e. Laurence is in prison.

Ye þat be of myght, }
Se that ye do right, } Think on youre othe.

ffor where þat ye do wrong, }
Ye shall mend hit among, } þough ye be neuer so loth.

Litell small been, } þat all aboute fleen, } They waggen their whyng.

Small bees sting.

Where as they light, }
The been will byte, } And also styng.

Loke þat ye do right, }
Both day & nyght, } Be-ware of wappys.

Beware of wasps.

Both erly & late, } Kepe well your pate } For after-clappys.²
